Perhaps you've noticed that I've been 'off the radar' for the past couple of months. The reason is that my dear father, Paul J. Wendell, passed away in April after valiantly living with lung cancer for the last couple of years. Actually Daddy-O (as I started to affectionally call him recently), beat the odds for over 20 years.

Not too long ago, I asked Dad to write about his time in WWII. In one of his stories, he mentioned that in the army it was thought you were killed by the bullet that had your name on it. So one day while stationed in Burma, he asked a local to engrave his name on a bullet and then proceeded to shoot it off. He hurt his hand, but no one else got to shoot that bullet! I told this story at Dad's funeral to illustrate his determination to make his own terms with life. Rosalie Prinzivalli my Feng Shui colleague and dear friend said, "I was awed by the story of your father shooting the bullet with his name. He understood Feng Shui long before you were able to consider it. And it once again proves that everyone in every culture has their own version of FS."

Indeed, when you distill it down, Feng Shui, is about having an intention, doing something about it and empowering or ritualizing that intention in some way. I now know Dad did that everyday and it was the source of his longevity and quality of life. He met his goal of celebrating his 88th birthday in January of this year. The above picture is of us at his party. "Daddy-O you are my inspiration and I will love you forever." xoj

Create the Life You Want: Feng Shui Tools for Abundant Living

Applied properly, Feng Shui can improve the quality of your life by balancing your personal and environmental energy, allowing you to experience more success at work, improved relationships, greater focus and clarity and better health.

During this one-day intensive, you will develop an understanding of Feng Shui as you:

- Discover and begin to apply Feng Shui's extraordinary analytical tools;
- Learn potent Feng Shui adjustments and techniques to manifest your intentions;
- Apply simple, powerful space-clearing methods to release unwanted energies;
- Evaluate design elements such as doors, halls, bed and desk placement;
- Examine sample floor plans to illustrate challenging design areas.

I will be back in touch soon to announce some of my own new beginnings, projects and online courses.

*May your Life be Well Intended + Your Heart Full,
